Board Reorganization Going Well – Still Need Some Volunteers

In the last issue, we announced a reorganization of our Board and things are proceeding very well. However, we still could use some additional assistance and have a couple of spots open on the Board and several less involved positions off the Board. We have some areas that involve just a little bit of time and energy and also some that involve a bunch, so if you are even thinking about it a little, PLEASE send us an e-mail (craig.Leighty@gmail.com) or give Craig Leighty: (910) 233-4692 or Terry Grove: (321) 276-4958 a call to discuss potential ways to get more involved or to at least get your questions answered.

ISCA DSA BALLOT

Scouting For Fun

by Todd Hatfield ISCA # 0035

When I started several years ago, gathering Scouting related Comics, Cartoons and other fun stuff, I never imagined the extent Boy Scouting has become ingrained in our society. I know BSA has been around for almost 100 years and a lot of people have been in the program for at least a short period of time. However until you see a cartoon on TV who's whole program is devoted to summer camp (1) (in a Boy Scout like setting), or read the Sunday paper and find a commentary on life through the eyes of a cartoon Scout Leader (2), or maybe as your walking with your children in your local toy store and come across a blister pack with a Scout like figurine (3) ready to take out an play with. That is when you start to see so many things are relating to Scouting in some form or another. It is amazing really.

I'll use a famous quote to show you where I'm headed with this, "Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery". Scouting has given the youth of America (and the world) a wonderful program and those same youth, as they grow up and make their way in adult life, seem to enjoy bringing back some of that influence, whether good or bad.

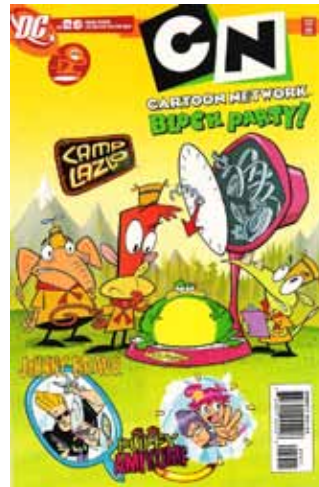

What I like to refer to as the "Funny side of Scouting", touches on the lighter side of Scout and Scout like Comic Books, Print Cartoons, TV related Cartoons, and all the stuff that goes along with a good marketing blitz. Some of them cross into a little of all types and most of them are nowhere near official. Yet they all show how much influence a little program, started by a couple of folks who just wanted to help some youth, has become so deeply ingrained in our society.

I was asked by Chuck Fisk and Doug Bearce to add my collection of Boy Scout comics to the outstanding listing they had published in their "Collecting Scouting Literature Vol. 1 & 2," for the update they have been working on. So with their permission this listing is the result.

The Listing is broken down into 3 main categories and some additional lists for Adult only and Girl Scouting. They are in a comic book type of formatting...i.e. size and/or art style. The first type (4) is an official publication or approved by the BSA. The 2nd type (5) is "Boy Scout Like;" it has a full correct uniform or correct use of the Boy Scout name. The 3rd type (6) is the most loose of the 3 with a Scouting like uniform, program or story, but the uniforms are not quite right or the names are something other then "Boy Scouts." I have found some adult only types too and have listed some Girl Scouting Comics as well.

As far as I have been able to tell, the Comic Book and Scouting started some time in the 1930's, with the peak some time in the late 40's early 50's. The depiction of Scouting, and it runs deep, is from the Famous Funnies comic "Roy Powers Eagle Scout" (7) to the Scout like program of Walt Disney's "Junior Woodchucks" (8) and of course the satirical and bizarre like Marvel Comics "Crazy Super Special" (9).

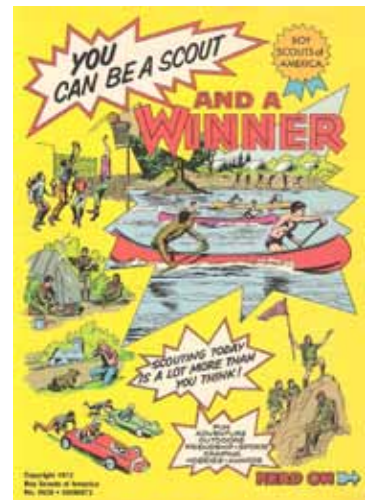

I hope you find this listing useful and fun. As with most collecting nothing is ever complete so if you find anything you just don't think is right or can add to it please let me know! I think we all need to chuckle at ourselves from time to time. Keep Smiling.

Did You Know

Neil Armstrong, the first man to walk on the moon, is an Eagle Scout. When he said, "The Eagle has landed," he wasn't kidding. In 1969, Armstrong became the first Eagle Scout to be portrayed on a U.S. postage stamp— called "The Man on the Moon."

The Invention merit badge (1911–1918) required the candidate to obtain a patent.

The first Eagle Scout to earn all available merit badges was Leon Wallace in 1922.

The BSA sells 2.3 million merit badges—one for each person in the state of Utah—every year.

Of 121 merit badges, the one earned most by Scouts across the country is First Aid; more than 84,419 Scouts earned the badge in 2008.

Raymond Cobb was 25 when he reportedly became the first "Complete Scout," completing all merit badges and earning Eagle, Ace, Ranger, Silver, and Quartermaster Awards.

The total number of merit badges earned in 1911 was 85; the number earned in 2008 was 1,913,676.

Each year, the BSA awards 6 million pocket certificates. If stacked on top of one another like a deck of cards, they would be as tall as the Empire State Building, the Washington Monument, both Sears Towers (now Willis Tower), and the John Hancock Conservatory combined.

A Weekend To Remember

by Tod Johnson ISCA # 0678

Remember the largest Scouting event and when it was? You'll find the answer at the end of this article.

The weekend of April 16-18th found over 20,000 Scouts and Scouters attending the Northern California 100th Anniversary Jamboree, slated as the second largest Scouting event in the country this year. This year's 100th Anniversary of Scouting will bring many planned celebrations all over our country. Eleven Northern California BSA Councils participated in this gala celebration where Scouts spent all weekend getting a taste of what will be in store for National Jamboree attendees this summer. Scouts enjoyed a variety of activities including Mountain Man exhibits, Fly Casting, Monkey Bridge, Disabilities Awareness, Climbing Walls, Merit Badge Midway, Model Railroad, Orienteering, Gold Panning, BMX Bike Riding, BB gun and Archery, Action Games and, of course, the Scouting Memorabilia Museum.

Chaired by Keith "Uncle Buck" McColm and Tod Johnson, eight ISCA members along with many others helped plan and assemble "The Scouting Museum" which had over 5,000 square feet of display space zigzagging back and forth over 4 long isles. Open 18 hours over three days, The Scouting Museum displayed 100 years of Scouting History to over 4,500 visitors with Saturday being "crunch" day. Many old friends re-united, reminisced and swapped stories about what it was like in the "good old days."

The Museum staff enjoyed watching dads as they escorted their young sons through the museum and proclaimed, "That's what I had when I was your age." or "This is what your grandfather wore when he was a boy!"

One exhibit displayed an original "Saturday Blade" newspaper from 1916. W.D. Boyce's "5 cent" newspaper, mailed weekly to his "paper boys," they would earn 2 cents for each copy sold. Also on display was the W.D. Boyce "Merit Award of 1912," a medal a paper boy could earn was on display along with a Bicycle Contest promotional that encouraged competition among the young carriers. Display ads encouraging boys to join Lone Scouts are prevalent inside.

Another exhibit reports that the city of Monterey Bay, CA was the home to the first Boy Scout troop in 1908. Newspaper articles printed in 1916, 1936 and 1950 describe General R.I. Bullard of the Presidio of Monterey, 8th Infantry, as BSA Founder in America, having traveled to England to visit Lord Baden Powell. Upon his return, General Bullard started a Boy Scout troop in California. The picture taken in 1908 is compelling. Current members of BSA Troop 90 from Monterey, CA were surprised to see the exhibit because they claim the heritage of the Nations First Troop at 102 years old.

There was hardly an area of collecting that wasn't covered... Mafeking, Baden Powell, uniforms, camp gear, compasses, books, insignia, Boy Rangers, Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Exploring, Senior Scouting, Sea Scouts, Order of the Arrow, Knights of Dunamis, morse code keys, banners, flags and pole toppers, Norman Rockwell and Joseph Csatsari prints abounded around the room. It was all very impressive.

Two "model" Boy Scout campsites from early 1920s and 1960s were erected by Keith "Uncle Buck" McColm, ISCA Life Member, along with another 90 feet of Scouting History table displays.

Representative uniforms from the early days of Scouting, Cub Scouts, Sea Scouts, Air Explorers, Explorers and even Girl Scouts hung in strategic places throughout the museum.

Presenters included: Keith "Uncle Buck" McColm - Baden Powell artifacts, General Scouting, Bronzes, Liberty Bonds Poster, 20's jackets.

Tod Johnson - Loma Prieta Scout Museum with 144 feet of displays including General Scouting items divided by decades, uniforms, posters, OA, pins, medals, woodbadge, banners, flags, Cub Scouts, WD Boyce, National and World Jamborees.

Steve Kline - SFBAC Artifacts

Bob Lake - Uniforms, handbooks, OA, Rockwell

Steve Marshall - 40's Explorer/Venturer uniforms

Fred Manss - SF Council, BSA literature, MB sashes, music, early scout maps, 1939 world's fair at Treasure Island

David Miura - Scouting license plate display

Phil Mulvihill - 20's uniforms and celebrity photos

Jack Borde - Mt. Diablo, Camp Wolfboro, OA, R&W's

James Chamberlain - Gen. Scouting, Cub Scouts, foreign Scouting, 20's to present.

A few questions overheard by young Scouts included, "Why is that Boy Scout waving red and white flags on the tower?" (Semaphore), "Why does that Boy Scout wear a dress in the picture?" (Scottish Scout wearing a kilt) and "What is Morse Code, Dad?" We've come a long way in Scout rank requirements.

All that came to visit The Scouting Museum were glad they stopped to look. Positive, approving comments were heard often throughout the weekend. It truly made the effort to share and teach a bit of Scouting history worth while. After the final box was packed to head for home, we all agreed to "do it again" in 100 years.

World Jamboree

1951 World Jamboree Coins and Fob

With the 2011 World Jamboree coming up next year, I was reminded of another World Jamboree in Europe held almost 60 years ago, the 1951 World Jamboree. 2010 is also the 100th anniversary of the start of Scouting in Austria. This summer the Austrians are holding their National Jamboree – urSPRUNG, near Vienna. “urSPRUNG” is German for origin or beginning. The urSPRUNG Jamboree will be the largest Scouting event in Austria since the 1951 World Jamboree held at Bad Ischl, near Salzburg.

The Austrians are planning a large display of Austrian Scouting items. While I was reviewing some of the items from 1951, I found three unusual ones that had an interesting designer. They were bronze and silver colored coins along with a watch fob. The items were engraved with the name “Köttenstorfer” below the image of BP. I was interested in this name and began a search on who or what that name represented.

The internet searches lead me to an Austrian artist, Hans Köttenstorfer, that worked for the Austrian Mint and designed quite a number of the Austrian Glückmunzen (Lucky tokens), numerous Kalendermedaillen (Calendar Medals) and many other medals. His most lasting design was the Austrian 5 Shilling coin that was in circulation from 1960 to 2001. For more than 40 years the Austrians used the coin in most daily transactions until Austria switched to the Euro. Hans Köttenstorfer was born in 1911 and died in 1995; in 1951 he was about 40 years old and entering the high point in his career when he designed the World Jamboree items.

The two types of World Jamboree metal items, the coin and watch fob, were not common souvenir items, Austria was still recovering from World War II and supplies were limited. The coins are either bronze or silver and 40 mm round. The watch fob was slightly smaller at 30 mm round with a loop for the leather strap. All three items have identical images of BP one side and the 1951 World Jamboree emblem on the other.

Looking For Red & Whites

Mystery RWS

There is one new RWS to report, THOMAS A. EDISON/ COUNCIL/NEW JERSEY RWS (pb over gb). Its format is very close to the previously known cloth back one, except for a few tag differences. The real differences appear in the backing, which is a clear plastic over a fine gauze. It is on a no twill (NT) material. It turned up on eBay on a nicely printed page with 4 CSPs from that council – the S-2, S-4, S-5, and S-6. But there was no explanation. So does anyone know when and why it was issued?

The most unusual new half strip is the PIONEER TRAILS 1/2GB. It is only the eighth one found so far in Explorer colors. There are four new 1/2KRs. From Wisconsin, we have BADGER COUNCIL (Type 1) – a Type 2 has been previously reported. The TWIN LAKES COUNCIL (Type 1) has the word council, which was missing in the previously known one from that council. Both the SHENANDOAH AREA COUNCIL (Type 1) and the YUCCA COUNCIL (Type 2) are the first from those councils.

Two new 1/2RWs have surfaced. The LINCOLN TRAILS 1/2RW is the first half strip from that council, but the NORTHERN NEW MEXICO 1/2RW is lacking the word council, which appears on the previously reported half strip from that council. Two different issues from such a small council is a bit of a surprise.

The one new Sea Scout strip TENNESSEE VALLEY/ COUNCIL r/e (WBS) is unusual in that it has a rolled edge (r/e). Its existence had been rumored for years, but this is the first time a picture was ever obtained.

Two new mbs have been reported. The FORT LEWIS mbs differs from the previously reported one in that the word fort is spelled out rather than abbreviated as Ft. The PORTSMOUTH (pl)(name = 82 mm) has a plastic rather than cloth back and a shorter name (82 versus 91 mm).

In terms of interesting and/or funny community strips (cms) we have MIO, BETWEEN, DUCKTOWN, and TURTLETOWN.

Special thanks go to the following contributors; Mike Evans. Destry Hofard, John Hoffman, Bill Loebble, Roy More, and Dave Ramp.

WAY BACK WHEN

1910: The Year of the American Boy Scout Part 2: Creating the Structure

By the end of December 1909, newspaper publisher William D. Boyce had returned to London from a failed photographic expedition to British East Africa. In the old English city, as the apocryphal story goes, he found himself lost in a dense fog bank on the way to an appointment. Unable to determine his direction, Boyce was approached by a young, lantern-toting English Boy Scout who offered to help. The lad escorted Boyce to his destination, whereupon the thankful American offered him a tip – one that was promptly was refused. Intrigued, Boyce asked to be taken to the offices of Scouting founder, Robert Baden-Powell, but unfortunately, he was out of the country. Nonplussed, Boyce amassed a trunk full of Scouting literature and made his way back to Washington, DC where he incorporated the name “Boy Scouts of America” (BSA) on February 8, 1910.

Fully intent upon starting a branch of Baden-Powell’s Scouts in Chicago on his own, he found it financially difficult to create such an organization. So, Boyce must have been relieved when approached that May by YMCA International Boys’ Work secretary Edgar M. Robinson, who proposed that the YMCA take over the operation of his American Scouting franchise. Boyce agreed, and both men left quickly for Washington, DC to attend a Congressional hearing on BSA’s proposed federal charter.

Teaming up with the YMCA strengthened publisher William D. Boyce’s hand in the halls of Congress. His efforts to obtain a federal charter for the Boy Scouts had bogged down in the House Committee on Education. Even as Boyce shook hands with YMCA International Boys’ Work secretary Edgar M. Robinson in Chicago on May 3, 1910, an initial hearing on the bill was taking place. Boyce’s Washington attorney, R. Woodland Gates, told committee members that his client had been detained in Chicago. Gates summarized the Scouting idea, telling Rep. Joseph V. Graff (an Illinois politician) that, “Mr. Boyce wants to get the boys thinking of healthy things, to go out into the forests and the woods, and all that sort of thing.” Graff told Gates that “it would be well for us to hear” Boyce in person, and the committee adjourned until Tuesday, May 10.

When Boyce appeared on Capitol Hill that next Tuesday he had at his side not only Edgar Robinson of the YMCA, but also Ernest Thompson Seton and two representatives of the English Scouting movement. Since meeting with Boyce in Chicago on May 3, Robinson had been moving nonstop, returning to New York on May 4 aboard the Twentieth Century Limited train to meet Charles Heald, national secretary of the Boy Scouts of England, and W.B. Wakefield, an official of the English YMCA. The two were due in New York aboard ship on May 5 and were scheduled to give a lecture at the Brooklyn YMCA that same evening. But their steamer arrived too late in the day for them to pass quarantine. Robinson, faced with the prospect of addressing the crowd himself, telephoned Seton and “begged him to come to my rescue without delay.”¹ Robinson was on stage making apologies when Seton arrived; he introduced him “with enthusiasm and relief.” The British Scouting emissaries, having cleared quarantine, spoke the next evening at the YMCA on Twenty-third Street, Manhattan, and on the day after that in Newark, New Jersey, returning to Manhattan to address the Union League Club.

Their presence resolved a major problem for Robinson. Up to the arrival of Heald and Wakefield, all Robinson’s information about Scouting had come from printed material. The Briton’s experience enabled them to respond to a deluge of questions from the curious and the enthusiastic. “Newspaper publicity had opened the flood gates and the pent up desire for information seemed like a flood that would sweep us off our feet,” Robinson later recalled. “Our two English friends served as life preservers to help us keep our heads above the tide.”²

The Scouting experts might also strengthen Boyce’s hand in Congress. On May 10, Robinson, Seton, Heald and Wakefield took the train to Washington to give testimony before the House Education Committee, this time presided over by its Republican chairman, Rep. James Francis Burke of Pennsylvania.

Boyce initially deferred to Robinson, who told Burke, Graff and the rest of the committee that Scouting was of the greatest interest to the YMCA, which had 800 boys’ departments in North America and had welcomed between 12,000 and 15,000 youths to its camps the previous summer. “After reading Baden-Powell’s book and talking with those who are familiar with the movement in England, I am satisfied that there is great advantage to be gained from the introducing of some systematic way of conducting our outings, using the principle that the Boy Scouts organization has worked out," Robinson told the committee.

"We also feel that there is some need of a unifying headquarters so that the idea may not be debauched, if I may use that word, by men who would use it for other purposes than for the benefit of the boys, and also by men whose intentions might be good, but who would lack judgment and experience in the matter," Robinson continued. "The movement is too good a thing to suffer, as some other movements have in this country, from the lack of central leadership. I am interested in this Boy Scouts movement; I thoroughly believe in the idea, and I am satisfied that all over this country the idea is going to take."

But committee members indicated some perplexity as to why the Congress should grant the Boy Scouts of America a federal charter when it could just as well organize in each of the forty-six states. One declared bluntly to Robinson that, "It is a very rare thing for Congress to authorize an incorporation."

Next it was Seton's turn to make the Scouting case. He summarized his own experience over the previous nine years since setting up his Indian camp in Cos Cob as "better than I dreamed of." By 1903 his movement had expanded to 140 camps, and each year "they kept increasing until they spread all over the United States, and although I kept myself out of sight as far as I could...the newspapers took it up against my wish," spreading the Woodcraft gospel far and near.

Taking up the need for a federal charter, Seton conflated his own work with that of Baden-Powell in his references to a movement for boys. He could see that Scouting had overshadowed his Indians so it made more sense to cooperate than to compete, Seton said. "The principle is so sound that I want it started again in some national form, with a charter which will protect the name – I do not care what the name is, the name proposed now seems to be the most acceptable."

Boyce testified last and was the object of the most pointed questions as to the need for a federal charter. Skepticism had been apparent in questions from the committee. Boyce tackled the issue head-on. "We would not have applied to Congress if we had felt that it could have been accomplished in any other way. This is big enough to be a national affair and for the Congress of our country to recognize it, or I do not care to have anything to do with it," he declared.³

Frustrated with the tenor of questions from the members of the committee, Boyce quickly came perilously close to butting heads with its chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: You will understand that the questions asked by the members of the committee, while they may in themselves indicate either favor or hostility to this measure, are put by gentlemen who are sitting here in a judicial capacity, and that we are simply endeavoring –

MR. BOYCE: It is not necessary for you to explain that to me.

THE CHAIRMAN: We are simply trying to ascertain the reason back of this application. There is not a gentleman on this committee who does not appreciate fully the generosity displayed by the projectors of this movement, and our inclination is to help ... but we cannot under any circumstances forget the great difficulty that we will encounter in both Houses, or at least in the House, in light of established precedent, if we report a bill of this character and do not fortify ourselves with the very best information and most unanswerable arguments in support of it."

MR. GRAFF: It would be injurious to your movement to a very great degree if this committee should report the bill to grant this charter and it should subsequently be defeated in either House ... and the committee would not be wise if they reported the bill when it was not clear that they could get it through. So we are endeavoring to get all the information we can. I think every gentleman here appreciates the great work.

MR. BOYCE: If you gentlemen will ask any questions I will endeavor to answer them ... I never thought for a minute that there might be any opposition when neither politics, nor religion, nor money is involved in a bill of this kind. I cannot see where anyone should object, but I can see that such things do arise in your minds now."⁴

Indeed, Boyce's bill soon after died a quiet death in committee. There were, as members of the committee had indicated, concerns as to precedent. Were the Congress to give the Boy Scouts a federal charter, countless other organizations with philanthropic aims would come forward demanding the same recognition. But there was some suspicion that the legislation might also have fallen victim to lobbying by William Randolph Hearst, a newspaper publisher with far more influence in Congress than Boyce. By comparison Boyce was small change.

Hearst's shadow had fallen over the organization before the May committee hearings. Robinson spotted a reference to the American Boy Scouts in Hearst's New York American, and on May 9, even as he prepared to leave for Washington and the committee hearing, attended a meeting called by Hearst at the Waldorf-Astoria.⁵ Hearst announced that he would launch the American equivalent of the English Boy Scouts of General Robert Baden-Powell, with a clear military orientation— no surprise from one known for his jingoistic fulminations.

William Randolph Hearst

Robinson took the floor that warm May evening – he would recall that the windows of the meeting room were open to the spring air and city noise – and informed Hearst and the others present "that the Boy Scouts of America was already in existence and that it would not be well to have rivalry between the organizations." Noting that the name of the American Boy Scouts was likely to lead to confusion with the Boy Scouts of America, Robinson asked whether the name had been chosen because Hearst's New York American was sponsoring the new organization. Hearst made no answer to this, but his aide, James McGrath, shortly to become national secretary of the competing Scout organization, said the group would push on – adding condescendingly that "the other Boy Scout movements could come in under the banner of the American Boy Scouts."⁶

Hearst set up headquarters for his American Boy Scouts at the Manhattan offices of his flagship newspaper, the New York Journal.

Officers of the American Boy Scouts included Admiral George Dewey, commander of U.S. Naval forces at the Battle of Manila Bay against Spain where in April 1898 he famously uttered the order, "You may fire when ready, Gridley." Another prominent New Yorker on the ABS board was Congressman Jefferson Monroe Levy, a lawyer and financier whose real estate holdings included, most prominently, Monticello, the Virginia estate of Thomas Jefferson, which Levy had inherited from an uncle.⁷ Hearst also recruited Major General F. D. Grant, son of the Civil War general and U.S. president. From the start, the American Boy Scouts had an unquestionably military cast, purposing to instruct members in army drill and tactics.⁸

Hearst's initiative had at least one beneficial effect from the standpoint of the Boy Scouts of America: the emergence of the American Boy Scouts drove most of the other Scout-type organizations in existence into BSA's arms. These included the United States Boy Scouts, founded by the retired Army Colonel Peter Bomus, the National Scouts of America, founded by Brigadier General William Verbeck,⁹ principal of St. John's Military School in Manlius, New York, and a Scouting offshoot of the National Highway Protective Association. Scattered groups like the Leather Stocking Scouts, the Peace Scouts, and others, entered the fold.¹⁰

On the first day of June, Robinson established BSA headquarters in a room next to his own in the YMCA offices at 124 East 28th Street, New York, engaging Philadelphia YMCA official John L. Alexander as managing secretary, and hiring one stenographer. Inquiries poured in from around the country until "unopened letters at times were stacked like cordwood on the floor."¹¹ Within a fortnight the administrative burden became crushing. Robinson called a meeting on June 21 of men representing more than twenty organizations involved in social work and education, seeking advice and assistance. The meeting established committee on permanent organization with executive powers. The inclusion of social science experts and prominent advocates of reform lent the committee weight.

One of its members was Dr. Luther H. Gulick,¹² who had directed physical education in New York City public schools and now headed the child hygiene department at the Russell Sage Foundation, founded in 1907 to improve U.S. social conditions.¹³ Others included the journalists Lincoln Steffens and Jacob Riis, whose 1890 book, How the Other Half Lives, documented New York tenement life in photos and text, stoking public outrage and prompting reforms.¹⁴

Ernest Seton, named chairman of the committee, "threw himself into" the work, Robinson observed. For Seton it could only seem a golden opportunity to graft his Woodcraft Indian model onto Scouting as it took root in America.

"His zeal and energy were astounding," Robinson later wrote. "He wanted to contribute all of his Woodcraft Indian program to this new movement, to have it merge in the blood stream and lose its identity as a separate outside movement. He stood prepared to give freely all of his ideas and experience and ability."¹⁵

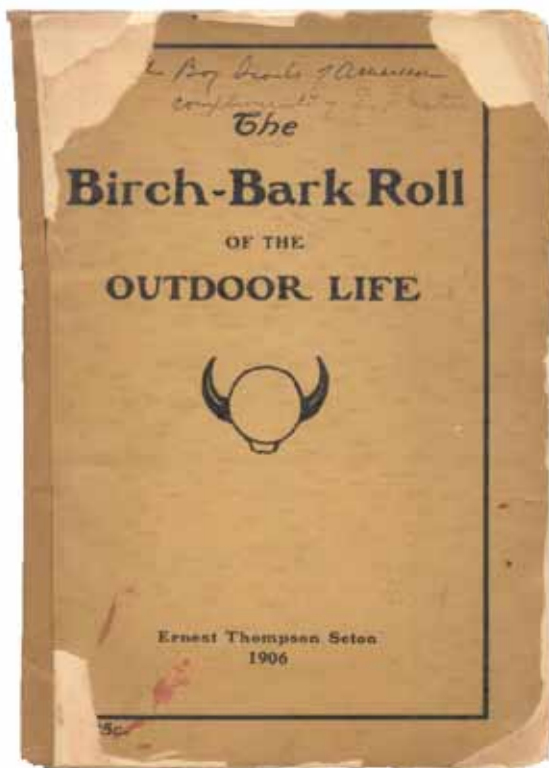

But Seton's hopes were soon dashed. "He was astounded at the reluctance of this new Committee to swallow at a gulp what he was so eager to give," wrote his YMCA sponsor. "With increasing bewilderment it dawned on him that this new movement in America, true to form, only wanted to pick and choose from the program that he had created. To him it seemed that the tendency was to choose the less important, and ignore the more important items" in his program."¹⁶

To be sure, Seton found himself in an uncomfortable position. Although his expertise in naturalism, woodcraft and Indian lore, and his reputation as a best-selling author, were valued by Robinson and others trying to set the Boy Scouts of America on its feet, the organizational reference point was the Boy Scouts of Robert Baden-Powell. Moreover, Seton had not yet resolved his differences with Baden-Powell over the intellectual origins of Scouting as set forth in Scouting for Boys, still the Bible for Scouting enthusiasts in America. But the dominance of Baden-Powell's version of Scouting compelled Seton to come to terms with his British competitor though he was still unable to lay to rest his grievances.

The copyright dispute had simmered along into early 1910, Seton pressing the matter in correspondence in March and again in the form of his "Open Letter to General Sir Robert Baden-Powell." On top of his standing complaint about the excessive borrowing from his Birch-Bark Roll, Seton informed Baden-Powell that he had heard from his New York publishing sources that the rights to Scouting for Boys had been offered to an American publisher. In May, publisher Frank Doubleday fired off a cable to Baden-Powell demanding clarification.¹⁷

"I am so very sorry to have left your note of March 3rd unanswered for such an unconscionable length of time," Baden-Powell wrote to Seton on May 31, "but I have been rather overdone with business and allowed it to get overlooked until a cable from Doubleday reminded me of it." He told Seton he could not "entirely confirm" the acknowledgement of Seton's contribution to Scouting for Boys that Seton had proposed. Baden-Powell assured Seton that he had no knowledge of any forthcoming American edition of Scouting for Boys, adding that "if it should be desirable and agreeable to you I would produce it in collaboration with you." Adapted to "suit the American boy," it would surely "have a great success." He added that he would be in Canada in August, and could stop in New York.¹⁸

Despite their unresolved differences, collaboration on an American edition was an attractive proposition to Seton and suited his purposes as chairman of the BSA Committee of Organization. Near the top of the list of priorities for the emerging movement was a manual along lines of Scouting for Boys that would answer many if not all of the questions about Scouting flooding the borrowed headquarters office on East Twenty-Eighth Street. Here was Seton's chance to shape Baden-Powell's vision of Scouting into something closer to his own.

In the event, the "Open Letter" was never published. Even as Seton was venting his frustration the landscape in the United States was shifting as his YMCA contacts took hold of Scouting. Seton must have had second thoughts about publicly throwing down the gauntlet to Baden-Powell. Upon receiving Baden-Powell's letter of May 31, he found it in his interest to extend an olive branch. "I do not think it is worth while discussing on paper some of the matters mentioned in my letter. You and I are agreed upon all the main principles that we wish to have the boys actively interested in, in this movement. While both of us have been in it for many years, I realize that yours is a better form of organization than mine, therefore I wish to use (it) in America."

This, he continued, "would mean reproducing a portion of your 'Scouting for Boys.' Just how much, I am not yet clear, but in each subsequent issue I should expect to publish less of it." From his vantage point amid efforts to launch a U.S. version of Scouting, Seton could see that the starting point had to be the Baden-Powell model. But once a framework was raised, Seton believed, he could shape the substance of American Scouting on lines closer to his Woodcraft Indians. It was "only the outline of organization that interests me," he bluntly told Baden-Powell, "and that, you know, is neither copyrighted here, nor copyrightable. Still, I wish to feel that we are working together," he added, proposing to pay Baden-Powell $250 for the exclusive American rights to the handbook. He wanted to publish a large edition to be sold at twenty-five cents a copy, noting that this price would entail "considerable loss" for him personally. "Of course I should give you complete credit for your splendid achievements in this field."¹⁹

Collecting Q & A

Yucca Camping Experience

Hi, I want to welcome you to our thirtieth-fifth column. I have a couple great items to catch up on this month for our column. The first deals with an old felt patch that led me to an old method of Boy Scout camping with which I was not familiar. Make sure you and your troop enjoy the BSA's 100th anniversary centennial and all of the special activities that will come along with it! It is really an exciting and exciting year.

The first area that I will attempt to address this month was sent in by one of our fellow collectors named Kory Lewis who emailed me a question about an old felt patch that he recently acquired that I thought I would share with the readers of the column. The patch is embroidered on green felt and looks like it was very similar to the kind of patches our council produced for our local camp back in the early 1930's. I have only seen two of these "Yucca" patches in all my years of collecting so I am wondering if they were just a local Council patch in Kansas City, Missouri or if they were issued across the country.

I dug through my collection and located my red Yucca patch along with my old camp patches. The red patch that I have in my collection is embroidered "Asst. Dep. Chief" on top and then Yucca along the bottom. I assume the red color and title meant that the wearer was the assistant chief of the camp. My red Yucca patch still has the manufacturer's sticker on the reverse. The patch was made by the Lowe & Campbell Sporting Goods Co. The Lowe & Campbell Athletic Goods was a sports equipment manufacturer and retailer based in Kansas City, Missouri until 1931 when it was acquired by Wilson Sporting Goods. So this dates the patch before 1931.

As you can see, there is nothing to identify the patch as a BSA patch, but the connection to the Yucca camping program suggests that it is a Scout patch. If you have seen these "Yucca" patches or something similar in your area of the country, let me know and you may help us clear up a mystery--local or national?

Yucca camping originated during the early days of Scouting in the United States. It was evidently a very regimented method for camping that was very military in its design. There was a set of responsibilities that were assigned to all eight patrol members. Whenever something had to be accomplished, it was very clear from assigned responsibilities whose job it was to accomplish each specific task. I spent some glorious years in the infantry in the U.S. Army some time ago and Yucca camping was much more organized than anything I saw or participated in during my wonderful time in the Army. In fact, my squad leader and platoon sergeant would have been proud to have seen Yucca camping in operation - it was more organized than anything we ever did in Company D.

The Boy Scout Service Library published a guide to Yucca Camping back in the 1930's. Since these pamphlets are hard to find these days, I thought I would highlight a little about this form of camping in this column. If camping were an Olympic event today, Yucca camping would be closest to synchronized swimming. The Boy Scout Service Library describes what movements a patrol would go through when a suitable campsite had been located:

The kitchen equipment team would fall out of line first and would march directly into the camp site. After the kitchen equipment bearer had located a suitable spot to set up the kitchen, the tent squad would continue on for a few feet and fall out upon flat land to set up tents. Once the tent group swung off the trail and located the flat site for camping, the command "Halt" would be given followed soon after by "Unslung". Packs would then be placed on the ground with their straps down in front of each Scout in the tent group.

At the command "Open Packs!" each Scout would drop to one knee that would rest against his Yucca pack. The packs

The command "Make Camp!" would be called out and each Scout would go into action. Teamwork enters into the picture at this point in a rather elaborate coordinated set of actions. Scouts number 1 (Patrol Leader) and 7 (Pioneer) would quickly take up positions in front of their tents. Scouts 3 (Scribe) and 5 (Signalman) would pick up the pup tents, walk four paces and drop them. They would then take up positions in front of Scouts 1 and 7 and unroll the tent, allowing Scouts 3 and 5 to stake it down. Scouts 1 and 7 would assemble the tent poles. Numbers 5 and 7 would stake their side of the tent--number 7 would place the poles upright while number 5 draws the tent taut. They then move down the line repeating assembly until all tents are raised.

Scout number 1 would issue a directive on where the flagpole should be placed and number 7 would complete the placement. Number 5 would gather fuel and prepare the campfire with the aid of the Scribe who would carefully enter the details of the trip into the patrol log.

did the shopping. Scout number 4 (Quartermaster) grabs his spade and quickly digs a fireplace once number 2 issues the location where it will be dug.

Number 6 (Ranger) grabs the largest pot, fills it with water and returns it to the food preparation area. Scout number 8 (Woodsmen) gathers tinder and wood and lays the fire. Number 4 lights the fire and builds it up for cooking. Number 8 has built a cross piece to hang pots over the fire and has that quickly in place. As number 2 cooks, number 4 keeps the utensils clean and “at the ready.” Number 6 and 8 withdraw a tarp from Number 8’s pack and builds the kitchen shelter.

sends all messages. Number 8 identifies trees and animals in the area while if the Patrol Leader requires a chair to relax in, Scout number 7 builds it. Number 1 is in charge of patrol activities and number 2 is ready to step in if required.

The Scoutmaster never has to do much of anything; the area specialists were responsible for their area. In fact the junior leaders were expected to know what he wanted and give the order without being asked. Yucca supposedly drove parents to allow their Scouts to camp more often as it was organized, items came back clean. Since the Yucca packs were organized and each Scout bore his own load, they were not over-tired when they returned home. There were a specific set of instructions for everything from setting camp to forming the mess line or washing dishes. The Yucca system of camping could also be used by a two man group (Senior and Junior). I can not imagine the old Raven Patrol of Troop 75 in Detroit carrying this Yucca method of camping off successfully when I was a Scout--but it would have been fun to see what happened.

Hearing from Kory Lewis reminded me that he has just completed a book on the memorabilia for the Order of the Arrow's Tamegonit Lodge. He has done a great job finding and cataloging the flaps, neckerchiefs, patches, slides and other items related to Tamegonit Lodge in Kansas City. Having just finished a book, I know how long it takes and I want to congratulate Kory and other Scouters who take the time to carefully research their lodges, honor camping societies, camps, councils, etc. Most are a labor of love and their efforts will assist future generations of Scouts and Scouters Kory's book is entitled An Illustrated Guide to Tamegonit Lodge Memorabilia and information can be located at the following internet site: <http://broadkawvalley.wordpress.com/book/> or by emailing him at: broadkawvalley@gmail.com.

If other readers have written books or developed websites dedicated to local Scouting history or memorabilia, please email me a brief summary, contact information and other pertinent details and I will publish them as I have space in future columns. My first book should be sold out by the end of summer camp this year and I am now at work on the second and final book of the series -- One Hundred Years of Eagle Scouts in the Heart of America Council. There are many great Scouting stories to be told so congratulations to all of you who help to record this history for future generations.

In the March 2010 ISCA Journal I wrote about the Golden Jubilee Camporee that I attended in Detroit when I was a young Scout back in 1960. I received a nice letter from a Detroit area resident and ISCA member -- Gordon Draper about the 1957 and 1960 anniversary camporees that occurred in Detroit and across the country. Gordon highlighted the activities that we participated in during the 1960 Jubilee Camporees which were held in the Detroit Area Council from July 22-24, 1960 and they brought back some great memories.

The activities included:

A series of Night Orientation Tests that took place on Friday night for patrols that had camp set up and were ready for the weekend. There were ten tests that could yield up to ten points for each activity per patrol (or a total of 100 points).

Stars--point out the North Star and four constellations.

Sounds--correctly identify ten man made sounds in the brush.

Smell--identify five different odors by smelling them.

On Saturday morning a Conservation County Fair was held by adult Scouters for the Scouts which included a Soil and Water Conservation demonstration as well as other demonstrations to highlight conservation topics. I can still remember this demonstration from 50 years ago as my dad was the one who built the soil exposure model for our district.

After the Conservation Fair there were Patrol Skill Contests including:

Compass

Fire building and string burning

Knot tying

Map making

Flint and steel

Tent pitching

Conservation wildlife

Conservation wood lore

Judging height and distance and Observation and identifying errors in a camp setting.

The Tribes of Siwanis and Tecopa

by Ryan C. Bushore ISCA #

Camp Arataba, named for a Mojave Indian Chief, was located in the Barton Flats area of the San Bernardino County California Mountains. It was founded in 1924 by George W. Walker, with 150 Scouts in attendance that first year and was operated by Arrowhead Area Council, originally San Bernardino Area Council. The council covered the territory of both San Bernardino County and Clark County, Nevada (Las Vegas). Prior to 1938, Camp Arataba was the council's name camp, as several districts operated other, smaller camps. Up until that point, Scouts from the Las Vegas area had to be bussed some 250 miles to attend summer camp. In the 1930's, the Las Vegas Scouts dominated the camp wide competitions and were all too eager to make the trip.

Like most Scout camps, the early years started off slowly, but by 1930 Camp Arataba was holding three full sessions and breaking attendance records nearly every year. Prior to the start of the first summer session, the camp would hold a Pioneer session with a group of older boys, known as the Trail Blazers. These Pioneer sessions were used to prep the camp and train the staff members prior to the arrival of the Scouts for summer camp. These Trail Blazers camped in tipis and did a considerable amount of exploring and making new trails. Originally two, but later changed to three years of camp attendance was required before boys could partake in these Pioneer periods at camp. During this same time period, the camp was also featured in a BSA movie that premiered at the Mann's Chinese Theater in Los Angeles.

While at camp, the boys were entertained with the usual Scouting fare. Over the years, the attendees partook in different activities such as circus night, backwards day, capture the flag day, buckskin day, Junior Olympics day, 49'er day, and of coarse Indian day. Several day and over-night hikes were also offered, depending on the particular Scout. Some hikes were limited to the Scout's rank while others were limited due to a Scout's "status" at camp. Most of the younger boys went on the Gypsy hike, and "B" line hike, or to neighboring Camp Ro-Ki-Li, operated by Orange County Council. Much like the Tribe of Gorgonio at Camp Ro-Ki-Li, the members of the Tribe of Siwanis would hike to the top San Gorgonio and spend the night in the forest.

The Tribe of Siwanis dates back to 1929 and followed the Indian methodology and replaced the camp belt honor system previously used in camp. Members were selected by current members, based on their ability, performance, outstanding service, Scout Oath and sportsmanship, while at camp. Originally, the Tribe only had three levels of membership, but as the numbers grew, so did the need to expand the program to consist of Braves, Warriors, Medicine Men, and Chiefs (see right). Although the Camp Director, R.J. Roberts (for most of this period) was the supreme Chief of the fire, several of the other camp staff members were also held the rank of Chief in the Tribe.

As Camp attendance grew to 300 Scouts in the late 1930's, it became necessary to open an additional camp. This new camp, Camp Tecopa, named for the Indian Chief of the Southern Nevada Paiute Tribe, opened in 1938 and was located 40 miles northwest of Las Vegas near Mt. Charleston. Like Camp Arataba, this camp would operate its own honor society.

The Tribe of Tecopa operated in the same fashion as the Tribe of Siwanis, including the rank structure of its members. Unlike Camp Arataba, Camp Tecopa was able to offer activities such as visits to the recently completed Boulder (Hoover) Dam and fossil hunting. Coinciding with the Tribe of Siwanis, and the Tribe of Tecopa the two camps also operated an "Honor Patrol," later renamed to the "Honor Tribe" which was open to all Scouts in attendance.

ARATABA CHIEF

Arataba Camp Staff

Unfortunately, Camp Tecopa did not exist for very long and by the mid 1940's, the camp ceased operation. To this day, very little information is available regarding Camp Tecopa or the Tribe of Tecopa; it remains a complete mystery to most.

In 1952, the Tribe of Siwanis was replaced by the Order of the Arrow's Wisumahi Lodge # 478. In 1960, Camp Arataba's dinning hall burnt down resulting in the leasehold with the Forest Service being sold and the camp was replaced by Camp Helendade.

The big Jubilee Campfire was held on Saturday evening. Our troops marched in from around the camp while singing our favorite Scout songs. There was an opening ceremony and fire-lighting event that culminated in a large, roaring fire in the midst of the gathered troops. There was a master of ceremonies who welcomed everyone and had a roll call of the Troops in attendance. We sang some local Scout songs—I recall our favorite song was the D-Bar-A Reservation song (Killy, Killy, Killy, Watch, Watch, Watch, Watch, Key, Cum, Killy, Kum, Kow-Wha!)

After the songs there were patrol skits that had been carefully chosen for the event. One of them was the circumstances around W.D. Boyce and the English Scout who helped him during the London Fog. We then had an elaborate award ceremony with various awards and ribbons being passed out to Scouts, patrols and units. After taps, the Troops quietly returned to our campsites where we received the Jubilee Camporee patch when we departed the next morning.

The last update this month has to do with the historic merit badges that the BSA has offered during the Centennial year to Boy Scouts. Here is a picture of the new "historic merit badges" (with gold mylar borders) that are being offered in 2010 along with the old discontinued merit badges that they were modeled after. The new merit badges are named: Signaling, Tracking, Pathfinding, and Carpentry. Tracking replaces Stalking while the others replace the old Signaling, Pathfinding, and Carpentry.

Hope you enjoyed this column. Remember I always welcome your input for future columns. Just send me an email to adubill@aol.com or letter with your questions or comments for future issues! Thank you to all who have participated by sending a note or idea for this column. The best of Scouting to you and yours in our Centennial year!

Raccoon Lodge 145 Badge Discovered

Among the many wonderful items found in the Tony Lazewski collection is the first known insignia from lodge Raccoon 145, which would have preceded Nachenum 145 in Middletown, Ohio. The item discovered is a red arrow made of heavy cardstock, with a hole in the feather area for suspending from some twine. The arrow appears to have been worn hanging down. In the center is what looks like a hand drawn arrow with three "W"s superimposed. In what looks like typewriter letters we see written "Raccoon Lodge #145 Order of the Arrow." On the back in pencil someone has written a name and the date 12/29/39. The raccoon was the totem for Nachenum 145 and the Blue Book shows the charter year for the lodge number 145 to be 1939.

We can only guess about the use of this item. It might have been made up by someone in the lodge during its first year for wear at a meeting. Maybe one was made for everyone attending. Paper badges are generally excluded from Blue Book listings but if this was from our lodge we would want it.

Nisha Kittan (114) is the new lodge created by the merger of Kishkakon 32 and Taleka 81 in Illinois. We hear that each member was allowed to buy five of their first flap at the lodge banquet in January. We hope members will be able to obtain more later in the year. The first one we saw on eBay went for $42 in late January, but in succeeding months the prices realized came way down to a little over $5 in some cases.

Dave Hultburg wrote to report that on February 24, 2010, Keystone Area and York-Adams Councils votes in favor of merger. He had reported earlier on Patch-L that the executive boards of the councils had recommended with no dissenting votes that the two consolidate. The effective date of the merger was April 1. The temporary name for the new council is Keystone York-Adams, with a permanent name to be chosen within six months. Lodges Susquehannock XI and Tuckahoe 386 are expected to merge on January 1, 2011. Name and number of the new lodge will be determined later by youth of the two merging lodges.

A pair of Montana Scout shirts was offered on eBay in January, with the first selling for $560 and the second for $495. The same bidder was the winner of both shirts. Both had 1957 National Jamboree patches on them and one had a nice council patch plus segments, but the key piece on both shirts was the Peta 300 S1 first flap, rarity rated 9. The mint example of this flap in the Dave Thomas collection was priced at $1725.

In early March two different Es Kaelgu 311 felt flaps were offered on eBay, and both were listed as first flaps. One had a black border and was priced at $200 and the second had a red border and was priced at $1100 (both had best offer options). The Blue Book shows the red border flap as the F2 and says it was a gift flap for the merger committee. It is not noted as a first flap. The black border flap is listed as the F1 first flap. Neither badge sold at their asking prices.

One of the side areas of OA collecting is lodge totems. These were more popular in the post WWII era and not all lodges made them even then. One from Chequah 194 is shown in the Wabaningo book, for example. We were reminded of them when a totem from Kashapiwigamak 191 was offered on eBay in February. This was a piece of cast and machined aluminum shaped like a long thin peace pipe, hanging from a leather thong. This totem sold for $56.

Also in February a Virginia man sent a message to Patch-L offering a really incredible group of 37 extremely rare OA badges. Many of these are once in a decade items, if then. There were three badges priced at $20,000 or more (214x2, 246a1, 272f1) and four more over $10,000 (35r1, 73r1, 161 Ne-Pah-Win nc slide, 463x1). The offer of these patches was particularly interesting because the seller was no one we recognized, nor did a quick survey of friends and dealers reveal any clues. We wondered how someone could accumulate such a group of rare patches from across the country without becoming well known.

After talking to a number of people we concluded that these patches actually belonged to a well-known collector who had accumulated many outstanding duplicates over recent years. For reasons unknown to us he apparently was looking to unload some great items. We speculate that he was unable to use these great badges as he had hoped to trade for other rare items he wanted. We have not heard how many, if any of these items, were sold. We believe another group of rare items were consigned to at least one dealer. Anyone who wishes to see the original list from Virginia can contact Bruce via email for a copy.

Steve Narolski sent in a list of prices realized on eBay when he sold some issues of Wawookia 400. Among the noteworthy pieces were an F1 ($330), F2 ($428), QS1 "Wawookia" ($201) and YN1 (aka N2) $356.

Gordon Draper writes that Migisi Opawgan 162 has issued three flaps with their new council name, Great Lakes Council, from the merger of Detroit Area and Clinton Valley Councils. Both Chippewa 29 and Migisi Opawgan will continue to exist as separate lodges for a while.

Mark Chilutti and James Deroba wrote to us in February to report seven new badges from Unami 1. First was a 2010 National Jamboree flap. Then a flap and commemorating the OA 95th and BSA 100th anniversaries (500 made). This flap has a white sash. Next is a CSP commemorating the BSA 100th (500). Then a flap and CSP pair sold as a set (200 @ $25). The flap in this set has a red sash and the CSP says "Unami Lodge 95th." Then a second flap and CSP set (50 @ $100). The flap in this set has a black sash and the CSP says "Unami Lodge Benefactor."

Mark says the two sets were issued in nice BSA 100th Anniversary folders that make it clear the money raised was to support projects at camp. Almost all of the benefactor sets sold at the council dinner when first available. The lodge has committed to raising and donating $25,000 to Cradle of Liberty Council this year.

Mark also had some interesting information on the Oyandone 1 flap we mentioned last time. This had been offered on eBay with accompanying notes saying it had been made by a group attempting to establish the OA in Canada. We had heard many years ago that it was instead a spoof (oh-you-need-one). Now Mark says the Canada story is true.

He tells us that in the early to mid 1980's a Scout group from Canada bonded with Unami brothers from their Penn's Wood chapter, which was in South Philadelphia. The Canadians did create their own version of the OA, which he recalls they called the Order of the Ascalon), and they called their lodge Oyandone 1. It never became an official program of the Canadian Boy Scouts, but they did make flaps and they continued to come down for lodge weekends for a few years.

Staying on the topic of Unami lodge, Larry Trook wrote to report that he had recently acquired in Tulsa a small group of old items from that lodge. He sent us images of what could be 1x5 green felt turtle (from around 1938), an R7 red felt, a Treasure Island card, and three membership cards for Wimachtendienk W. W. Two of the cards were dated 1939 and 1940 and the third was a life membership card.

Owaneco 313 is offering a pair of BSA 100th anniversary flaps that could be ordered online. The daylight trader flap was $10 and the limited edition nighttime flap was $50. Their site said the flaps would be available until June 30. The order form is here: <http://www.owaneco.org/fs/page/000798/100thcommemorativeoftocouncil.pdf>

On March 1 we found over 500 first flaps for sale on eBay, including those in stores. The majority of these were offered by three sellers: scoutpatchnetwork, siestabeachtrading, and TSPA. Among these offerings were 38 badges from the Dave Thomas collection, apparently being recycled. That complete and pristine collection was broken up several years ago. We noticed three examples of the Wolverine 501 F1 rarity 10 first flap being offered. Over 30 badges were priced at $1000 or more, with the highest at $4000 (511f1).

In March, a two patch (flap/CSP) set from Abnaki 102 and Narragansett Council that commemorated the BSA 100th anniversary was offered on eBay. The seller reported that only 100 sets were made and the set number was embroidered into each of the patches. The set offered was #026 and it sold for $104. Good luck acquiring these 100th anniversary collectors.

Rick Obermeyer wrote us in April with an interesting note about Tipisa 326 flap. The feathers on their flaps represent the number of chapters in their lodge. The council is reducing districts, however, and that will drop the number of chapters from 14 to 11. The lodge will then revert to a flap they used earlier with 11 feathers. He wondered if it was the first time a lodge had reverted to an earlier flap for their uniform wear, actually going down in issue number. We couldn't think of another example but it seems very possible someone has.

Fred Duersch writes that he and a friend bought about 160 of the 40th anniversary flaps from Twoa-Ba-Cha 514 on eBay from seller Cudog22. These flaps differ from the official issue in several places.

The border color is slightly darker and the color of the lettering and lake is slightly different. They were told by the seller that the flaps were made in the 1990s but never delivered to the lodge.

They also obtained from the same source about 80 of the 514Zs1 and were told they came from the same warehouse. These were ordered by the lodge advisor in 1986 and were known as the "friendship flap" because he gave them as a reward to his friends. Fred says he is keeping these flaps off the market.

We have reported before that seller Cudog22 has been offering quantities of apparently older flaps from many different lodges that appear to be newly made or newly bordered, including 514. One of the most notable examples of this is the quantity of remade Salado 551 S1 first flaps he has sold, sometimes 5 in a lot (the real 551s1 has a brown ladder; the remake has a black ladder).

Esauw Huppeday 560 has adopted a water theme for their 2010 Dixie Fellowship delegate flap, which says "Dixie Delewet." In stylized blue letters the flap also says "ESWAUTER."

Klahican 331 has recently issued a series of flaps and two-piece sets commemorating warships named North Carolina. This interesting group includes the only sailing ship-of-the-line built for the US Navy, a Confederate ironclad, an early aircraft carrier, two battleships, and a nuclear submarine.

A Canalino 90 S1 first flap sold on eBay in April for $1916. We remember this highly restricted flap with asking prices around $5000 during the boom times. Prices like that pulled some flaps out of retirement and that increased supply, plus a poor economy, has apparently dropped the valuation. The nice example of this flap in the Dave Thomas collection was priced at $2850.

The Interactive OA Blue Book is available online. It is now possible for anyone to add new issues, comment on existing issues, and upload images. One feature is the "What's New" tab that shows the most recent changes. Also when you search a lodge you can see a report of how many issues are in the database for it. There are also several active discussions about what needs to happen within the Blue Book going forward. To check it out go to <http://oabluebook.com/>

Quick comments:

The Shenshawpotoo 276 X1 takes its odd shape from the borders of their council camp, Rock Enon.

A Nahak 526 F1 first flap with a minor thread break (rarity rating 10) sold on eBay in January for $1691 ($4750).

Long House Council was officially formed by the merger of Hiawatha Seaway and Cayuga Councils on March 12, 2010.

Mikanakawa 101 has issued a flap for the National Jamboree with the date 2010 embroidered in and, in what may be a first for an OA flap, the URL for the lodge's web site WWW.MIKI.ORG.

Bob Walton reports that Klahican 331 has issued a new flap with red mylar border.

In January Ignacio Quiroz of Illinois passed away due to a number of health problems. JR, as he was known, was a longtime Scouting professional, and a fixture at Chicago and nearby TORs for decades. He always rented 10+ tables and offered a wide variety of Scout memorabilia. He was the driving force behind the Ottawa, IL, trade-o-ree, the home town of W. D. Boyce.

Please drop us a note with news that you think would be of interest to other collectors. If you have information from your Lodge or Section to share, send an e-mail, photocopies (with descriptions and preferably in color), or scan to either of us. You reach Dave at dave.minnihan@bowne.com or Bruce at shelleyotte@comcast.net For publication we prefer black & white TIFF images of new issues scanned at 300 dots per inch (DPI), reduced 50%. We will trade for new issues if you wish.

Collecting Camp Patches

Camp Clear Lake

It has been said that everyone loves a mystery. I'm not sure if that is an overstatement or not but I would like to start off with a mystery submitted by Rick Obermeyer of FL. In the June 2008 issue of the ISCA Journal, I showed 4 patches from Camp Clear Lake, the SSC of Suwannee River Area Council in FL, dated 1949-52. Rick sent scans of 3 felt Clear Lake patches that he would like to know if they are from Suwannee River Area, Gulf Stream, Westchester-Putnam, Mecklenburg County or another BSA Council. Can anyone identify these felts?

R, and K (for Optimists, Rotarians, and Kiwanis) and I do have to report that the seller was not Mork.

Chris Jensen of SC sent a scan of a 1935 postcard from CAMP REINBERG located in Palatine, IL. This camp was not listed in any of my camp references. Chris did a Google search and found that it is built in 1914-18 and is still in use. It is probable that Chicago Area Scouts used this facility for troop camping, as travel to Owasippi in Southwest Michigan would have been more costly and more difficult than camping at Reinberg. Can anyone confirm this theory?

CL - #3

Steve DeWick of PA sent a scan of a great old patch he recent acquired from CAMP MILLS from 1936. It is in remarkable condition. Can anyone confirm it is from Detroit Area Council? This patch made me think about what is the earliest dated BSA camp patch. Many of the early patches were not dated. I believe the earliest dated patch I have is a CAMP TONKAWA from Hennepin County Council, MN dated 1922. Would any readers like to share scans of any earlier dated camp patches?

Moving on to more modern camps, I recently picked up a patch from CAMP CONFUSION. Having an FDL on the patch indicates a BSA relationship although I have no idea where it is from (my suspicion is that it was a summer camp for insurance regulators but I can't be certain).

Another oldie on ebay was a round felt (front and back shown)

There was an unusual old felt on ebay that was identified as being from CAMP OPROKI from Evanston (IL) Council. The patch has the letters O, from CAMP JEFFERSON from Great Falls Area Council in MT. The description said it was from 1921 although Great Falls Area Council operated from 1925-28. If the 1921 date were correct, it would be from Great Falls Council (1915-25). Either way, it is an oldie.

Manion's Auction House had a colorful oldie from CAMP WESTMORELAND operated by Tennessee Valley Council in AL. It is an unusual design for a felt – a yellow W in the center of a winged black felt patch with green, yellow and red feathers on both wings.

There was a patch listed from CAMP NOCHAWAY from Chehaw Council in GA. I was not aware of that camp so I wrote to the seller for any additional info he might have on this patch. He said it came in a collection – this patch was in an old yellowed white standard envelope that had “Camp Nochaway” “Georgia” and “1920’s” written on the outside. The collection came from the family of an old Georgia Scouter.

Since Chehaw Council opened in 1939, the info furnished by the seller didn't make complete sense. The envelope did not have the council name – the seller thought it would have been from Chehaw. I did a search on Google and came up with quite a bit of info on CAMP NOCHAWAY. A 1923 brochure from the camp indicated it was owned by Nochaway Council (spelled Notchaway in the National BSA records) and was located in Rhodes Ferry, GA. The camp had a point system in woodcraft, scoutcraft and campcraft. The ten Scouts earning the largest number of points were given a canoe trip down the Flint River to the Gulf after the camp season. The camp fee was $5.00/week.

How is this for an unusual camp souvenir? It was labeled a Boy Scout 1927 Owasippi Souvenir Cancel Camp. It consisted of a small bag of fir tree needles from the Pine Woods of CAMP OWASIPPI. Attached was a tag with a 2 cent red stamp cancelled on July 21, 1927 that said “Greetings from Frank & Art, Owasippi Camps B.S.A. – Crystal Lake, Whitehall, Mich.”

John Hoffman of NJ sent scans of 4 arc patches from Alaska. SALMON LAKE CAMP is from Midnight Sun Council. NOME CAMP is from the same council. Nome was not in the first Camp

Book but will be in the 2nd edition. CAMP BAKER was not known as an Alaskan camp – the closest one I know of is from Oregon Trail Council. Finally UNALAKLEET CAMP was also unknown to me and John said it is now a Bible camp.

John also sent a scan of a Scout camp from Selma, AL with the catchy name of WATOOOLAKOKAHATCHEE

(try saying that fast three times!). I googled it and did not find any info except for maps of where it is located. Does anyone know of a BSA camp name that has more letters (18) than this one? I know I don't.

Spoiler alert!!! My next column will be devoted to BSA Camp Neckerties. If any readers have any unusual or interesting camp n/c's that they would like me to include in the next column, please send me an email or note as soon as possible. I appreciate all of your contributions to this column.

Have a great summer of camping.

Badge Collectors Corner

Barbados

I am sitting down to my computer to write this edition, I am in the throws of packing things up and moving to Beijing, where I will start my new job in August 2010. Even after having moved a number of times in my life, I admit that it is not my favorite thing to do.

The hardest thing to prepare for is no badge trading for about the next 6 months. Argh! I must have all my papers and qualifications completed before my belongings can be shipped to me from Hong Kong and this takes about 3-4 months. I guess I will just have to be patient.

Trading is still my preferred method of getting badges for my collection but, I have to admit that sometimes it is necessary to break down and purchase them. I have a blog where I scan all the new badges I get as they come in. It helps others see what they might also want to get for their collection. I have a list of other blogs of similar interest as well. If you want to see my blog you can go here: www.worldbadger.blogspot.com and if you are interested in having your website or blog added to my list, just email me and I will be glad to comply.

This edition I thought I would look at the island of Barbados. In a chain of islands running roughly from the end of Florida to South America, Barbados is one of the more southern islands. It is in a tropical zone and has great weather all year long. It is a prime tourist destination and truly beautiful. I visited there back in 2002 for 5 days and really had a great time. It was once a British Colony and that is when Scouting started.

Scouting was starting in Barbados in 1912 with a troop registered at a local school. The island currently has about 2500 scouts registered with the majority of them in the capital of Bridgetown. The Scouts of Barbados are frequent visitors to various scouting activities throughout the Caribbean and overseas. Caribbean Jamborees, Pan-American Jamborees, Caribbean Cuborees and World Jamborees are just some of the places you almost always see Barbados Scouts.

There are really only three types of specific badges related to Barbados Scouting – National Flag, National Emblem and Location Identification. All the rank and merit badges are the same as the UK. They are fun to collect and quite nice looking as well. I have included a variety of them with this article. If you are interested in a listing of the badges from Barbados please contact me and I can send a PDF to you with color pictures.

As many of you read this I am sure you are getting ready for the National Jamboree this summer. I wish all of you happy camping and an enjoyable jamboree. Unfortunately my move will not work with Jamboree plans. If you have any questions or comments please feel free to contact me at worldbadger@yahoo.com. Happy badge collecting.

CSP CORNER

This and That

I had the chance to go to the Pittsburgh TOR and do a whirlwind of trading with old friends there. It was a great time – and was able to add many new and not so new CSPs to my collection. Don't know if you have noticed but I have, that there have been several top end first issue CSPs up for sale on ebay in recent weeks. I'm sure they were great chances for to fill those tough needs. The flood of new issues for the 100th and for FOS campaigns continues to dominate the market. It will be interesting to see how many there end up being by year's end. On to this edition's list of new issues and discoveries.

100th Anniversary Celebration... Founders of Scouting Mount Rushmore CSP

The Black Hills Area Council, Boy Scouts of America is excited to announce its "Founders of Scouting" Mount Rushmore Council Shoulder Patch. In celebration of the 100th Anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, we have commissioned a set of three special "limited edition" CSPs depicting four of the founders of the Boy Scouts of America in a similar pose to the four U.S. Presidents.
